

Pendulum Dowsing with Charts

Using a chart and pendulum is a method of extending your dowsing practice beyond the binary “yes/no” response to obtain more detailed information. As with asking “yes/no” questions with the pendulum, ensure that you are first grounded and have set-up the appropriate protections and permissions prior to proceeding. Remember that the pendulum (and the chart) is simply a tool; the response is directed by the energy entering your field from the universal collective or your subject.

Always obtain PERMISSION prior to beginning any dowsing practice.

- 1) State your INTENTION for this dowsing practice.
- 2) “Can I dowse for ____”
- 3) “May I dowse for ____”
- 4) “Should I dowse for ____”

ALL 3 MUST BE “YES” TO CONTINUE

Dowsing charts come in all forms, but the most common is the half radial shown below. Hold the pendulum so that it dangles at the centre point of the radial and set your pendulum in “question mode” or “standby motion” to begin. Ask a question that makes sense to the markers indicated on your chart. Allow the pendulum to indicate a specific direction on the radial chart which will reveal the response.

Troubleshooting: Check that your pendulum does not dangle more than 1 ½ to 2 inches from your finger. Use a pendulum with a pointed end for more accurate results. Enquire if this chart is the most appropriate one for your intended research. Enquire if NOW is the best time to conduct your intended research; sometimes time of day may affect the energetic flow. Sometimes, more than one choice may apply. Check with a “yes/no” question to ensure that you have obtained a full response.
